Quotes

“My favorite part of my job is incorporating science into therapy for innovation and increased efficacy.”

“I always knew that I would own a business. My grandparents and father raised me to have an entrepreneurial spirit along with my four siblings.

“I launched RemoteSpeech.com by recognizing that technology could solve a number of challenges that people were experiencing.”

“RemoteSpeech.com was launched in response to the growing demand for treatment among both children and adults, and the lack of qualified professionals that were available to serve them. There were incredible disparities in rural and metro areas. RemoteSpeech was built to ensure that anyone, anywhere, would have access to the vital services that they need in order to communicate with the world around them.”

“We launched VirtualTx as a response to market demand – We listened to therapists, school administrators, patients and their loved ones to understand what they liked and did not like about virtual treatment. VirtualTx is a direct response to these observations, as a one-stop shop that makes treatment, scheduling, tracking progress, billing and more a breeze!”

Executives Impart 'What it Takes' to Lead in Today's Business Landscape

Great leaders throughout history are known for not shying away from new processes, technologies and, most importantly, new markets. Instead, they have an inherent ability to “see” emerging trends that others do not. Not only that, they take action to collaborate with key creative partners to realize early-stage success in these newly emerging sectors. Orna Azulay did just that. As founder and president of Abington Speech Pathology Services, Inc. and the RemoteSpeech.com teletherapy platform, she significantly expanded the reach of her company—now a global powerhouse—by approaching an existing therapy protocol in a new and more effective way.
